Case Name: Anderson vs Martin	Case #: 5206/17

Subject: Sexual Exploitation of a Minor & Attempted Kidnaping

Police Record# 1-JFC1

State laws recognize the value in drafting statutes that include heightened criminal liability for those who commit sexual offenses against children. In fact, the Supreme Court identified “[t]he prevention of sexual exploitation and abuse of children” as a “government objective of surpassing importance.”<sup>1</sup> Child sexual abuse is defined by the American Psychological Association as “any interaction between a child and an adult (or another child) in which the child is used for the sexual stimulation of the perpetrator or an observer.”<sup>2</sup> State laws address the particular vulnerabilities that make children susceptible to sexual exploitation. One widely held rationale for providing heightened protections is that children lack the ability to consent to sexual acts.<sup>3</sup> Children do not have the capacity to understand sex, reproduction, the role of sex in relationships and its consequences, to make an informed decision.<sup>4</sup> They are also at a greater risk for abuse because of their general dependency on adults to meet their needs.<sup>5</sup> These reasons, along with the severe psychological trauma that results,<sup>6</sup> make child sexual abuse an offense requiring special attention. Based on the Above findings the Court finds enough evidence to declare Martin Hall guilty and sentence him for 30 Years in prison in total with 10,000$ in fine. His term starts immediately from today.
